By Scott A. Bass, Janet C. Rutledge, Elizabeth B. Douglass, and Wendy Y. Carter

Authors' Note:

This publication was made possible by the support of the Council of Graduate Schools (CGS)/Peterson's Award for Promoting an Inclusive Graduate Community, and a grant from the National Science Foundation's Presidential Awards for Excellence in Science, Mathematics and Engineering Mentoring (PAESMEM) program focused on identifying best practices in graduate student mentoring. The views reflected in the publication are those of the authors and do not necessarily reflect the views of the funding agencies.

The authors wish to acknowledge the major role played in the UMBC Graduate School's recruitment and retention efforts by Dr. Renetta Tull, the Director of PROMISE: Maryland's AGEP. Many of the Lessons Learned described in this publication were the result of the initiatives and programs that she has developed, and many of our current successes are due to her skills in shepherding our graduate students—particularly students from the under-represented minorities—through the degree completion process.
